"As brave as Helen Holmes," is an expression that has swept over the United States since Miss Holmes appeared in Kalem's "Hazards of Helen" railroad series.

She is thoroughly at home in the cab of an engine, in a telegraph office or atop of a freight train. Miss Holmes is very proud of the fact that she can run an engine or brake a train with the best brakeman in the country. "It's all in the day's work," she says. If Helen were told to hop into an aeroplane and pilot it into the clouds she'd obey orders without feeling the least bit afraid, and she knows nothing of these contraptions.

"Helen is a daredevil at heart," Director McGowan declared with satisfaction. "Any kind of a scarey feat appeals to her and the more danger and excitement there is the better she likes it. You'd think a pretty girl like Helen would be afraid of spoiling
